Dear Colleagues,

Welcome to the 2018-19 Friday Night Guest Lecture Series offered by the Erikson Institute for Education and Research of the Austen Riggs Center. We offer six lectures during this series, addressing a wide array of topics: from the psychoanalytic consulting room to interdisciplinary learning about history, culture, class, race, and sexuality. Lectures by George Yancy, PhD, and Annie Lee Jones, PhD, will critically examine issues of race and class. Historian and Riggs Trustee Thomas A. Kohut, PhD, will address the psychology of anti-Semitism in the Third Reich, and Ann Pellegrini, PhD, will deliver the Yasmin Roberts Memorial Lecture in April 2019. In the spirit of Erik Erikson, this lecture series endeavors to broaden our understanding of the psychological life of the individual by exploring multiple contexts that shape the internal world.

We will also host a Saturday Morning Workshop on Saturday, April 6, 2019. Open to licensed clinicians, this workshop features Sheldon Bach, PhD, conducting live supervision.

The Austen Riggs Center will celebrate its 100th anniversary in 2019 and we invite you attend our centennial events. More information will be forthcoming, but events will include public exhibits at the Corner House (48 Main Street, Stockbridge) and the Norman Rockwell Museum, scheduled to open in the summer of 2019. I also invite you to visit our website, www.austenriggs.org/erikson-institute, to explore other learning opportunities throughout the year.

Cordially,

Jane G. Tillman, PhD
